ASK THE ADVISORS

How do we offer ministry at this time?

Use this time to reclaim your foundational purpose

Go back to that conversation of why are we church, and how will that be expressed in our post-pandemic context.

Re-evaluate your ministry's focus and motivation

What had we been doing prior to this pandemic pause? How effective was it in producing fruit-bearing disciples?

Use this time for ministry pruning

This will allow for greater focus on current, effective activity and open your space for the new things that could emerge during these challenging times.

Pivot toward intentional focus on community engagement

Train and empower your members to become ministers unto each other, and onto those in the communities that surround us.

Consider how best to physically reengage

How do we continue to live in a 'both/and' world of digital and in-person worship?

Integrate virtual methodology

Is this the time to create long-term virtual small groups alongside face-to-face groups?

Build a model of self-care

A paradigm shift toward a more equitable distribution of your congregation's ministry improves the health and well-being of all.
